Module 5.2 Assignment

My husband, my role model.

His name is Faustino Gómez, and he was born and raised in the state of Guanajuato, Mexico. He grew up in a humble household as one of ten children, five sons and five daughters. Birthdays never included gifts; instead, the family celebrated with a simple meal made with love, even if they couldn't afford to invite anyone. Faustino only completed sixth grade, which is the end of primary school in Mexico, because he wanted to work and help his mother. He worked in the mornings and attended school in the afternoons, but once he finished sixth grade, he dedicated himself fully to working. Everything he earned, he gave to his mother, along with fruits and vegetables he harvested in the fields so his siblings would have food.

At just fourteen years old, his father brought him to the United States to work. Faustino took any job he could find in fields, ranches, turkey farms and eventually made his way to Nebraska. When he started working at Tyson, he worked opposite shifts and continued sending money to his mother so she would never struggle the way she once had. He became known for his work ethic; even the secretary from the opposite shift would pick him up when he didn't have a car because he was always willing to help.

Almost two years later, he met me, and we married. Now, nearly twenty years later, we share three beautiful blessings. Faustino has never stopped working. He is thoughtful, noble, kind, and always willing to help others. He bought his first truck in cash through hard work and discipline. He believes in saving because "you never know what the future holds." He wants our children to study so they can have a better future than he did. He loves spending time with his family, grilling, taking us shopping, staying involved in our kids' lives, and creating memories through travel. Everything he does is driven by love, responsibility, and the desire to give his family the life he never had.

1. Can you tell me a little about your childhood and where you grew up?

I grew up in a small town where life wasn't easy. We didn't have much, but we were happy because we had each other. Even though we were poor, our home was full of love and support. I started working at a very young age because I wanted to help my family and make sure we could have a better life. Those early years taught me responsibility, gratitude, and the importance of working hard for the people you love.

2. What motivates you the most in life today?

What motivates me the most is my family my loving wife and the beautiful blessings God has given us. They are the reasons I wake up every day wanting to do better and work harder. Knowing that I have people who depend on me and who believe in me pushes me to keep going, even when life gets difficult. My family is my strength, my purpose, and my biggest inspiration.

3. What are some hobbies or activities you enjoy doing in your free time?

I enjoy going out on family trips and taking my family out to eat. Spending time with them is one of my favorite things to do. I love playing with my kids, making them laugh, and being present in their lives. I also enjoy grilling for everyone, cooking outside, sharing food, and eating together as a family. Those moments bring me happiness and remind me of what truly matters.

4. What accomplishments are you most proud of?

I'm proud of myself for being able to buy my first vehicle in cash, using only my savings from years of hard work. I didn't have help just dedication, discipline, and the desire to give my family a better life. I'm also proud that I was able to buy my wife her own vehicle, something I always dreamed of doing for her. Another big accomplishment for me was buying a mobile home where we can raise our kids. Having a place to call our own, built through sacrifice and effort, means everything to me.

5. How do you balance work, family, and personal goals?

I balance work with family by always keeping them at the center of everything I do. I work hard to give them what they need, especially because I didn't have those things when I was little. My goals are based on them, making sure they have a better life, more opportunities, and the support I never had growing up. Every decision I make is for my wife and kids, and that helps me stay focused and motivated, no matter how busy life gets.

6. What is one challenge you've overcome that shaped who you are?

One of the biggest challenges that shaped me was having to work very hard from a young age. I started working as a kid because I wanted to help my family and make sure we could have a better life. Another challenge was crossing the border as a teenager. It was a difficult and dangerous journey, and it changed me forever. Going through that experience taught me strength, responsibility, and the importance of fighting for a better future. Those moments made me who I am today grateful, determined, and committed to giving my family the life I never had.

7. What goals are you currently working toward?

Right now, I'm working on improving my English so I can get a better job and create more opportunities for my family. I want my kids to be proud of me and see that I'm always trying to grow and become better. Learning a new language isn't easy, but it's a goal that means a lot to me because it represents progress, stability, and a better future for all of us.

8. What does family mean to you?

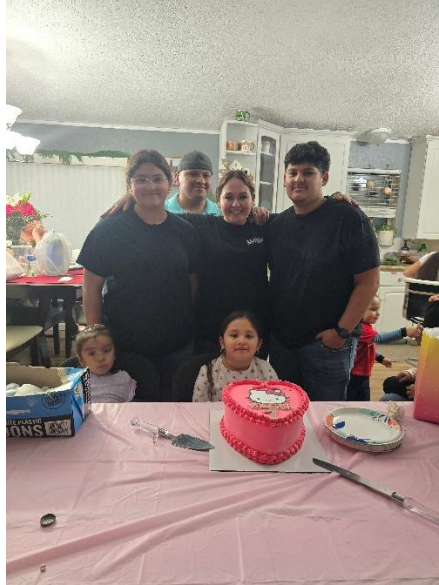

Family means the world to me. I love celebrating every special moment with my wife, showing her how much she means to me by giving her flowers and thoughtful gifts. She has been there for me through everything, and I want her to feel appreciated every day. Celebrating my daughter's quinceañera was also very important to me it's a tradition in our culture and being able to give her that moment made me proud. Family is my foundation, my happiness, and the reason I work so hard.

9. What is one thing that people might be surprised to learn about you?

People might be surprised to learn that I'm actually a very quiet and humble person. I don't talk much about myself or what I've been through. Most of the time, I keep my struggles and accomplishments private. I work hard, stay focused, and do everything for my family without expecting recognition. Even though I've overcome a lot, I don't show it off I just keep moving forward.

10. If you could give one piece of advice to others, what would it be?

My advice would be to finish school and work on a career so you can build a better life. Education opens doors, and having a career gives you stability and opportunities. I want people to know that it's never too late to improve yourself. I'm working on my own goals so my kids can be proud of me, and I hope others feel inspired to do the same for their families and their future.
